

Inclusive Teaching for Equitable Learning

As educators, we can work to create inclusive and equitable learning environments to ensure every student has the opportunities necessary to succeed.

In this five-module microcredential course, instructors gain proven strategies to create a more equitable and just learning environment.

Microcredential Course Modules:

1

Managing the Impact of Biases

This module helps instructors examine their own biases and offers them practices to help mitigate the impact of those biases in their instructional practices. In addition, the module includes how to use student feedback to reflect on and continually improve their work to become more inclusive educators.

2

Reducing Microaggressions in Learning Environments

The module focuses on helping instructors better understand the impact of microaggressions on students, learn how to recognize and effectively respond to microaggressions, and gain practices for mitigating the impact of microaggressions. The module also includes practices that empower students to recognize and address microaggressions.

3

Addressing Imposter Phenomenon and Stereotype Threat

In this module instructors will learn to recognize the symptoms of imposter phenomenon and stereotype threat along with a set of practices designed to reduce their impact, including cultivating a sense of belonging and promoting a growth mindset.

4

Creating Inclusive Learning Environments

Instructors will learn how to effectively build and share the academic and social support resources that will increase students' sense of belonging, foster respect for diverse identities, and set expectations for respectful dialogue.

5

Designing Equity-Centered Courses

The module provides instructors with practices for designing inclusive syllabi, incorporating diverse perspectives and experiences into their courses, and creating assignments with clear directions and explicit expectations. The module includes practices to ensure that all course resources and materials are accessible to every learner.
